County Fair Opens Despite Damage of Tents by Big Storm

Exhibit at Wauconda Is Expecting Fine Displays, Big Crowds

The Lake County Fair opened today at Wauconda despite the handicap of storm damage to the tents. Nearly all of the large tents were either flattened or blown partly down Monday evening by a strong wind that struck both Wauconda and Grayslake, blowing over trees and breaking power lines.

A force of 25 men was rushed to Wauconda from Milwaukee and one of the larger tents which was torn beyond use was replaced, and others repaired.

A good fair is expected this year if the weather is favorable. Scheduled a week later than usual this year, the annual exhibit is expected to attract more of the farmers who have completed their harvesting of small grains.

The fair today opened with a pet parade. It was 4-H Day and the boys engaged in a tractor driving contest. This evening the best entertainment in the county Fun Festival contest will be produced from the main platform.

In addition, there will be the regular free acts, which include a high pole performer, a woman trapeze artist, a dog act, and a comedy acrobatic act.

There will be carnival rides and concessions for additional amusement.

The fine arts exhibits in the Wauconda Grade school will be judged by Prof. Santos Zingale of the University of Wisconsin, Russell Van Cleave, and Harry Meloy of Chicago. Prof. Zingale will judge paintings and the other two photography.

Wayne Gatz of Libertyville will judge the rabbits and the floriculture and horticulture displays will (continued on page 5)

Kenosha County Fair At Wilmot Will Open Next Thursday, Aug. 13

The 33rd annual Kenosha County fair will open at noon next Thursday, Aug. 13 at the Wilmot, Wis., grounds and the usual excellent exhibition is expected during that day and the three days following. Grand stand acts will be open to the public Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons.

The commercial exhibit will be bigger than ever, and the cattle, swine, poultry and agricultural displays will equal anything in the past.

The six free acts afternoon and night will include Terrell Jacobs and his Jungle Killers, a lion taming act that is nationally known. Jacobs mixes tigers with his lions and these two natural enemies often engage in fights.

There will be auto racing Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoon and at night during the fair and on Sunday afternoon and evening there will be a rodeo. Every evening the acts, racing and rodeo will be a part of the program.

Arlington Tops Cowboys Through Carroll's Aid; Play Again on Sunday

Del Carroll, a sensational star of the Arlington Farms-CYO polo team, was labeled "one of the game's greatest" by Bud Tyler, veteran star of the South Dakota Cowboys, at the Arlington Farms Polo club, Buckley rd., near Libertyville, Sunday.

The praise followed Carroll's brilliant performance in leading Arlington Farms-CYO to a 9 to 5 victory over the Cowboys on the rainswept and muddy Arlington Farms field.

Tyler, who has played with and against the best of the polo players in his 25 years of competition, said in discussing Carroll's performance, "That guy can do more things with a polo mallet and make more impossible shots than anybody I've seen since Tommy Hitchcock." Comparing Carroll with Hitchcock is high praise indeed since the incomparable Tommy is considered to stand head and shoulders above any other player in the history of the game in America.

The two teams, who put on a thrilling and hair-raising exhibition for more than 400 polo fanatics on the slippery and dangerous field Sunday, return to action against each other again next Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

North Ave. Residents Ask Fireproof Plant If Regal Co. Rebuilds

Told They May Tap New 6-inch Water Main Without Added Cost

Residents of North ave. appeared before the village board Tuesday evening insisting that if the Regal Co. plant is rebuilt that the building be of fireproof and proper construction, and asked for arrangements on tapping the new six-inch water main now under construction in their area.

Charles Larsen, placed the question before the board on the matter of usage of water from the main being financed by the Crown Realty Co., Chicago for Oakwood Knolls subdivision, and was informed by Company President Mark Horwitz that:

1. All property owners now served by the 2-inch line of the south side of North ave. east of Main st., may tap the new 6-inch main without cost, industries excepted.

2. Industries and new water patrons will be expected to pay a pro-rata share of the cost of the new main.

Property owners on the south side of the street must pay the cost of boring under the street to make the connection with the 6-inch main on the north side, and arrangements are being made by which they will pool their money in letting a general contract for the work, and the village will serve as their agent.

The arrangement seemed satisfactory to those present at the meeting.

Permits Issued for First Houses in New Oakwood Knolls Area

Summer Homes to Be Built First, Permanent Ones Later On

Permits for the first two houses in the Crown Realty company's new subdivision, Oakwood Knolls, were issued Tuesday evening by the village board.

The houses, designed for summer use at Cross Lake are such as can be converted to year-round use later if desired. Put up as models, the houses will be used to show prospective buyers what they can get for their money. The appearance is attractive on paper.

Mark Horwitz, president of the company, presented to the board of trustees his brother, Joseph, who will have charge of the development of Oakwood Knolls.

He explained that near the lake summer cottages will be constructed, but that on North ave. or the paralleling Maplewood drive inside the subdivision only year-around houses will be built. The latter may be had at option on the lake-side, however.

"We don't anticipate a rush of year-round residents at first because of the lack of transportation, but in time that will develop just as it did at Island Lake which we built as a summer resort and now is an incorporated village with 65 per cent year-round residents," Horwitz said.

The real estate man said that there will be no financing of homes unless the buyer is able to make payments or makes his own improvements within a year's time.

Construction of a water main for the new subdivision is in progress with the Inland Lakes Construction Co. of Grayslake doing the work. It will connect with the village system at Main st. and North-ave.

Waukegan Dry Goods Completes 18-Month Building Remodeling

After 18 months of effort and the expenditure of a half million dollars the new Waukegan Dry Goods reopens on Thursday, Aug. 6 with one of the most beautiful department stores in the Midwest, Mr. James Klein, manager, announced today.

Plans have long been in progress to make the opening a gala event for Waukegan, with many attractions for the crowds expected to attend.

Over 200 prizes, including a valuable television set will be given away among those registering on the first three Opening Celebration days, today, Friday and Saturday. Every woman visitor will be presented with a lovely rose and every child will be given a balloon.

Designs for the new building incorporate the thinking of leading designers and construction experts and include every new device for the comfort and shopping ease of customers as well as for efficiency of store operation. Behind the scenes, but effective in speeding the movement of goods from receiving docks to selling areas, are individual floor lobbies and perimeter stockrooms. These facilities avoid the necessity for unpacking goods in the selling departments and provide for reserve stocks of merchandise which may be needed quickly to replenish supplies.

High speed freight and passenger elevators of the latest type have been installed for rapid vertical transportation. Three sets of stairways, two of which are enclosed in fire towers, join all floors.

Fixtures and decorations strike a high note of beauty in the new Waukegan Dry Goods Company. The use of color for decorating is particularly beautiful and ingenious, varying in combinations of pastels for each section. Over 30 pastel color combinations have been employed to create the striking but dignified effects, each one designed to enhance the beauty of the merchandise.

Two Girls Overcome By Gas of Father's Car at Cedar Lake

Gloria Reynertson, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Reynertson of Venetian Village was overcome by carbon monoxide gas and her sister, Linda, 5, badly affected by the gas while riding in the back seat of a car driven by their father at the north shore of Cedar Lake Monday evening.

The parents and a baby daughter in the front seat were not affected because the front windows of the car were open, but the two girls in the back seat got the full effect of the exhaust from a defective exhaust pipe.

Mr. Reynertson first became aware that something was wrong when the younger daughter started crying and he looked back in time to see the older daughter faint. He said he smelled oil fumes, but did not know that the odorless carbon monoxide gas was present.

They interrupted a village board meeting so that Mayor Barnstable, chief of the fire department, could rush oxygen to the unconscious girl. Dr. I. L. Breakstone of Antioch was called to take charge.

The two girls were back in normal health today.

Are cracks—big cracks—at last appearing in the Iron Curtain? Have oppressed people reached a point of desperation where they will run any risk in an effort to rid themselves of their masters? Has the death of Stalin, and the passing on of his powers to warring factions within the Kremlin, resulted in weaknesses in the Soviet system far greater, more far reaching, than the anti-communist world even could have hoped for a few months ago?

Today, any answers to these vast questions must be hedged about with "ifs," "ands" and "buts." No one can be sure. But there is a degree of optimism in the western world that is greater than we have known in a very long time.

The amazing East German riots were unprecedented. In Time's view, "they were jolting proof of a fact that the free world's leaders seem all too reluctant or timid to act upon: The people who have suffered communism hate it passionately . . . East German rebellion against communism seemed to give the anti-communist world its greatest opportunity—and challenge—since the cold war began."

U. S. News & World Report began a lead article datelined Berlin with these words: "Signs multiply that the world is witnessing the beginning of the end of the new Russian empire in Europe. The myth of strength through communism is shattered by open revolt. The men in the Kremlin are desperately playing for time to patch things up, but it is becoming increasingly doubtful if they can do so, even with time. Revolt is in the air in the Soviet part of the world."

At a press conference President Eisenhower said that revolt against tyranny seemed to be spreading like wildfire. According to the AP account, he added that this shows "that people who have known freedom rate it as the highest of human values and consider life itself worth spending to regain it."

Moreover, the unrest has not been confined to Eastern Germany. It is widespread in Czechoslovakia, too. And there are signs of an impending blowup of major proportions in Poland, which has been given the full communist treatment.

The difficulties faced by the anti-communists behind the Iron Curtain are enormous. Purges have destroyed much of their leadership. A ruthless, huge and tough-disciplined police force, equipped like an army, is always ready to move instantly to curb dissension. Every conceivable step has been taken to safeguard communist authority. Yet, as history has shown, unarmed people have overthrown dictatorships before, although at a terrible cost.

In a symbolic sense, one of the most striking news pictures of all time came out of the East Berlin riots and was widely printed in this country. It showed two rioters throwing stones at a Soviet tank. Obviously, the stones could not hurt the tank. Equally obviously, the rioters were in imminent peril of being blown to bits by the tank's guns. From a purely practical standpoint, the stone-throwing marked an ultimate in futility. Yet the spirit that it represented is the kind of spirit that has destroyed tyranny and created freedom ever since recorded history began.

Finally, these great events must certainly be the reason for Russia's stepped-up "peace offensive." A nation with such tremendous troubles at home is naturally eager to reduce her troubles and commitments elsewhere to the greatest possible extent.

Congratulations!

A few weeks ago the San Francisco Chronicle paid high tribute to the American railroads for the remarkable safety record established last year, when not a single passenger lost his life in a train accident.

The Chronicle made this pertinent comment: "A forward step in safety is by no means so spectacular as, say, the designing of a streamlined diesel locomotive or the piping of radio to every room and compartment. But in the year-by-year business of building that faith which is the keystone of employee and community relations, its impact is beyond any comparison."

"Recognizing this, the railroads have long since incorporated the study and practice of safety into their operations as a vital department, with such good effect that over the past 30 years they have reduced passenger fatalities by 85 per cent and employee fatalities by 80 per cent. We congratulate them for this long-range achievement. . . ."

There will be accidents on railroads—just as there will be accidents in any human activity. But we can be certain that those accidents will be as few in number as ingenuity, science, invention, and unrelenting emphasis on safe practices can make it possible.

Not So Simple

Why do people patronize one store—and pass right by the doors of another store?

The head of an association which represents food chains gave a general answer to that question in these words: "People like to do business with people they like. It is almost as simple as that—but the processes by which you get people to like you may not be simple. Public opinion is the combination of many likes and dislikes, many attitudes, many acts. Public opinion determines where people spend their money day after day; public opinion influences what stores will be profitable, what stores will fail."

Different people, obviously, want and seek different kinds of goods, different kinds of services, different attractions of many sorts. Back of all the promotional and public relations activities of the merchant, from advertising to improved employee training is the desire to attract as many people into his store as possible—in other words, to make people like him. And that will always be true so long as we have a free market and open competition.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

What is real to us,—good or evil, matter or spirit, life or death? That which we think determines what we are and possess, now and forever. This will be explained in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 13. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be SUBSTANCE.

The Golden Text is from Psalms (119: 89,90) "For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven. Thy faithfulness is unto all generations: thou hast established the earth, and it abideth."

Bible selections (King James Version) in the Lesson-Sermon include:
"For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God . . . While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal" (II Cor. 4: 15,18).

Selections from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, include:

"To himself, mortal and material man seems to be substance, but his sense of substance involves error and therefore is material, temporal. On the other hand, the immortal, spiritual man is really substantial, and reflects the eternal substance, or Spirit, which mortals hope for. He reflects the divine, which constitutes the only real and eternal entity" (p. 301).

the fourth inning of Friday night's game to defeat the Yanks 10-6. This game was previously scheduled for Wednesday night, but was rained out. The winning pitcher was Art Wertz, the third pitcher for the Tigers, and the losing pitcher was Paul Magiera. The Tiger catcher was Richard Hollatz and the Yank catcher was David Hunsaker.

The Yanks were ahead 6-2 when Richard Hollatz homered with the bases loaded to tie the score. Hollatz also had a double to his credit, and Art Wertz had a double and a triple. This game was called at the end of the fourth inning because of darkness.

The origin of fire is lost in antiquity, but it is probably safe to assume that on the first day man learned to use fire he burned himself. Burns are among the most common of all injuries, causing approximately 6,000 deaths in the U.S. every year.

Burns are classified as first, second or third degree, according to their severity. First degree burns are usually not serious. Second degree burns cause blistering of the skin, and a third degree burn causes the flesh to char.

Actually, the side-effects of a severe burn are more serious than the wound itself, although it is only in recent years that science has discovered this. The victim may suffer shock, which causes an estimated 80 per cent of deaths in fatal burns, or a serious infection may enter the burned area.

To combat these problems, blood plasma or whole blood may be given to restore body fluids lost in shock, and the body's resistance may be bolstered by administration of the hormones ACTH and cortisone. Antibiotics such as terramycin and penicillin are often given to prevent infection.

Treatment of the burn itself may be either by covering it with a pressure bandage or by the new open-air method, which has been used with success in Korea. In this method, the wound is not covered, but allowed to dry and heal in the open air.

But the best cure for burns is still prevention.

North Ave. Residents....

chief spokesmen in insisting that the village regulate the reconstruction of the Regal China Co. plant which was destroyed by fire 10 days ago.

They asked that the place be cleaned up if rebuilding is not contemplated.

Mayor James McMillen said that nothing has been brought up before the village board by the pottery company on the matter of rebuilding, but that if it decides to put up another factory, the board will call the officials in and insist on a building that will meet code requirements before a permit will be issued.

Trustee Arthur Hawkins said that he "would do what he can to influence them to put up a fire-proof building."

Warns Against Oral Agreements

Mrs. Anderson warned the village board that it should have everything in writing from the Regal China Company; that it does not carry out oral agreements unless forced to.

Complaint was made by Samson that the pottery company never posted building permits which Trustee Murrill Cunningham insisted it obtained.

Mrs. Anderson said she had difficulty with factory employees parking on her property.

Another complaint from a property owner was that the pottery company filled in its land so that the water drained on his property destroying his garden.

Not Village Responsibility

Mayor McMillen, after listening to the complaints, said that most of them were civil matters that would have to be corrected in the courts and were not under the jurisdiction of the village.

Mrs. Anderson paid high tribute to the work of the Antioch and visiting firemen.

"They did a good job," she said, "but God help us, had the wind been in the other direction that night."

Complaint was made by the neighbors of the factory that it wasn't kept in a clean and orderly condition, but Trustee Cunningham said that an inspection before the fire showed that the management was fast putting the grounds in good shape.

The discussion was orderly and only once did the mayor have to reprimand a speaker and that was on improper language.

It was revealed that the village is now operating under the Suburban Building Code and that a new code is being written which will be strict.

Man's Boots

By James Marsh

JOEY CASSIDY would do almost anything to get the boots in Pop Smith's store. He looked down at his own, worn, almost pathetic pair of once black boots, now covered with dust, heels twisted comically to one side.

The hot sun hung over Devil's Ridge, making it like a nightmare in the middle of the day. The street burned cruelly up through the holes in the old boots. He'd even steal if need be, he thought to himself. And he reckoned he'd be the only fifteen-year-old thief in the jail house if he got caught.

He turned reluctantly from the store window, took one more, long look at the high yellow topped boots with the dark green butterflies neatly engraved in the front. He'd be back to get them, he vowed. He'd get the money somehow. He'd ask his dad down at the livery stable; maybe he'd loan him the money and he could pay it back ... someday.

He crossed the street, stopping suddenly as two horsemen came down the main drag of Devil's Ridge. The man with the cold, dark eyes almost cut Joey down as he rode past him, thundering to a halt in front of Pop Smith's store. He was followed by another man who stayed near the horses. Joey watched the man with the black eyes enter the store. Joey continued across the street where his pinto was tied. Just as he mounted the little mare, he heard a gun shot. He looked in the direction of the sound just in time to see the man hurrying out of the store. He was carrying a heavy sack and the yellow boots.

Joey looked up and down the deserted street for help; the heat had driven all the towns people indoors. The sheriff's office was down at the other end of the street. He decided to go after the boots. He waited until the two men rode out of town, then he cut his pinto out in the direction of the dust that rose on the horizon. He'd just follow the dust, he reflected. It would stop soon, and when it did he'd take the money and the boots back to Pop.

The two distant riders crossed the river and stopped at Old Ben Foster's ranch. Joey followed them across the river, stopped his horse just short of the main gate, and continued on foot, wondering all the time if they were going to rob Old Ben.

He saw the horses tied outside the bunk house with the heavy sack strapped to the saddle. But the boots weren't there. He walked cautiously up to the horse and untied the bag. He opened it and found to his surprise, a sack full of cartridges and a new .45 Colt revolver. It was loaded and there was one shell missing. He pulled back the hammer and strode toward the bunk house.

He opened the door and saw the man with the cold eyes sitting on the cot trying desperately to pull on one of the yellow boots. His face was red with rage and the perspiration beaded his leathery forehead.

Joey leveled the .45 at the man. "Drop 'em, mister!"

The cowboy looked up. "Tarnation, boy, put that gun back before you blow the place to pieces."

"I see you steal them boots and this gun from Pop Smith's store," shouted Joey in boyish anger.

"You mean you saw me buy these things from old Pop?"

"Don't go denying you drilled Pop. I heard the shot from outside," said Joey still pointing the gun.

"I shot her into the floor to see if she worked proper." The man said producing a receipt of the goods purchased. Joey looked at it and blushed. Feeling more than a little foolish he handed the man his gun.

"I guess I wanted those boots so bad I plumb lost my head." He turned to leave. "Sorry."

"The cussed things don't fit me. I was in such a hurry to leave I didn't try them to size forehand."

The man with the black eyes handed the boots to Joey. "I reckon a boy with as much spunk as you should size up to a pair of man's boots."

WASHINGTON AND

"SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

A few million pounds of beef raised in New Zealand, sold cheaply in a few cities of the nation, raised a much greater beef in Washington.

Sales of this beef for less than half prevailing U. S. prices, came as the drive to repeal all U. S. tariff laws was started.

Butchers bought the beef from Swift & Co. for only 17 cents a pound, or less than half current U. S. price for live beef.

C. W. Harder, 39c steaks not only raised widespread public interest, but also three interesting questions.

Question ONE: New Zealand beef was permitted into U. S. because of an embargo on Canadian beef due to cattle disease. So Canadian beef was shipped to England; New Zealand beef normally shipped to Britain, was taken into the U. S.

The question: How can tariff laws be suspended without the consent of the Congress?

Question TWO: It developed the beef was in the U. S. for several months. But the new exporting Office of Price Stabilization prevented its sale while able.

The question: By what authority could OPS withhold cheap food from the market?

Question THREE: Out in San Francisco, Milton Maxwell, butchers union head, prohibited sale of the meat in all except two markets, which had contracted for the beef before he made his ruling. He claimed the beef was butchered under non-union conditions. But when informed it was killed by the New Zealand union, he still flatly refused to let his union butchers handle the meat.

The question: By what authority can a union leader dictate what foods can be sold?

But the entire New Zealand beef situation is held to throw into sharp focus the muddling created by everybody in Washington, above the rank of a chief clerk, assuming powers reserved by law for Congress. Assumption of power in matter by union leader creates still further questioning as to just who does formulate U. S. policy.

Some claim situation shows how close U. S. is to anarchy, a system where everybody assumes power at will.

Under U. S. Constitution, a strong, controlling Congress is set up to avoid anarchy.

Agriculture Department felt reaction first. Secretary Ezra Benson had just announced intention to bring free competition back to farm marketing.

But now Agriculture announces resumption of better price support. In all probabilities, U. S. taxpayers will once again pay many millions of dollars to buy up surplus U. S. beef.

Yet a strong effort is underway to abolish all tariff laws.

Yet, despite tariff, and war conditions, so far it has been impossible for U. S. to handle surplus production without spending huge tax sums.

Many feel use of tax money to keep U. S. agriculture healthy is sound policy under existing conditions.

But it will take a lot to convince taxpayers they should be assessed to take care of foreign farmers, too, which will be the result of tariff repeals.

road. The ladies each brought their pot luck lunches which truly delicious. Hamburgers, hot dogs, barbecues, potato salads, kidney bean salads, cakes, soft drinks, etc. After the luncheon some played canasta, while others went swimming with the children.

SHORT STORY

One Woman
To Another
By Dorothy Kilian

AS Dick reached up and tapped the knocker on the big oak door, Kay squeezed his other arm tight.

"I'm just plain scared, Dick. Country girls aren't used to such elegance as this."

"Don't be silly, honey. My Grandmother doesn't bite."

"I know, Dick. And I know what ambitions she has for you; her giving you such a wonderful position in the firm so soon after college shows that."

"The firm!"

Dick groaned. "The firm is going to fade away like an old soldier if someone can't talk Gram out of this stubborn notion of hers. She claims to run the business by Gram's journal—swears by the thing—and she says he would be dead set against expansion. We've got to change her mind!"

"How can I help, though?" Kay said. "I'm just a nobody to her."

The maid opened the door just then, and led the way into the front parlor where Gram sat erect in a straight-backed horse hair chair.

"I've been very anxious for you to meet Kay," Dick said. "Remember, I was telling you about her the other day."

"I listen to my husband's journal and that's enough for me," Gram retorted.

"How do you do?" Gram said primly. Then she turned to Dick. "The store manager was here again last night, pestering me about that expansion business," she snapped.

"But, Gram, you must listen—"

"I listen to my husband's journal, and that's enough for me," Gram retorted. "On page 47 he tells about some flighty fellow whose business had just gone under. He was always switching around to the newest area in the county, he over-expanded, and finally went bankrupt."

"Richard has told me about that journal of Mr. Watkins', and how much it means to you," Kay said. Gram really looked at Kay for the first time. "Yes, I treasure it," she sighed. "I guess because John seemed to set such a lot of store by it himself."

"I remember in school," Kay said, "when we were talking about the development of the West, our teacher pointed out what important source material journals are. You know, so many of the most prominent travellers and early settlers kept them."

"Go get them, Richard," Gram ordered.

Kay picked up the first volume and carefully opened it. "What beautiful penmanship!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, it's all in that same handwriting," Gram said. "I don't refer to that first volume so much. I guess it's because it was written up before I knew John."

"But beginnings are always so interesting," Kay murmured. She flicked over a number of pages, then read aloud, "I arrived in Los Angeles last night. Will lose no time in picking out a good site to buy. Fortunately, business lots are still within the range of my savings."

"Think of his having real savings when he was only twenty-one!" Gram interrupted.

"He had been in business back East?" Kay asked.

"Oh, yes, for four years. He had practically taken over his father's store in a little town near Rutland, Vermont."

"Why did he leave it?" Kay asked quietly.

"Because he was always one jump ahead of everyone," Gram answered.

"You mean to say he was willing to take the chance of moving an already prosperous business three thousand miles west, just to follow the trade?" Kay asked.

"Why, yes, if you want to put it that way," Gram answered, a little flustered.

There was a long, loud silence in the room. Then Gram chuckled, a deep sustained chuckle.

She cleared her throat and then finished briskly, "You'd better telephone our agent right away, so he'll be prepared to buy that suburban property the first thing tomorrow morning. At my time of life, I can't afford to see things drag."

Tips on Traffic Safety

By
CHARLES F. CARPENTIER
Secretary of State

Slow down as you approach the stop sign, marking a thruway highway. Don't dash up to it at a high rate of speed and then come to a sudden, skidding stop.

The fellow driving along the through highway knows he has the right-of-way, but he doesn't know you realize it. Show him you do by slowing down as you approach the intersection. Don't keep him guessing until the last instant.

Driving a motor vehicle is anything but a guessing game between you and other drivers. The more warning you can give, the more clearly you can indicate your intentions, the more easily other drivers are going to be able to avoid crashing into you or becoming so distracted trying to second-guess you they crash into something else.

Indicating your intentions is more than just arm signals when you plan to turn or stop; it also involves the way you handle your car, such as getting into the right hand lane when you plan to turn right or into the left hand lane when you plan to turn left.

Stay back of the pedestrian lane while you are waiting for a traffic light to change in your favor. It is an extreme discourtesy, especially where pedestrian traffic is heavy, to nudge your car into the crosswalk area and make people crossing the street detour around the front of it.

The driver of a car has a tremendous advantage over a person on foot, and in many situations it is the pedestrian's responsibility to keep out of the vehicle's way. But when the traffic light is against you, the pedestrian has the right-of-way (Section 32 (c), 1, Uniform Act Regulating Traffic.)

Stay back where you belong until the light changes, then give pedestrians who have been caught in the middle of the street an opportunity to get across before going ahead. Particularly, extend this courtesy to them when walking conditions are bad, when it is raining or there is snow and ice on the street. Impatient nudging forward on your part may cause a pedestrian to slip and fall.

THE ALCOHOLIC APE
He's full of love, he's full of cheer,
And full of rye and full of beer;
He cannot see the road ahead,
Perhaps he'll wake up slightly dead
He made himself a Micky Finn

Result: his head was in a spin,
His tombstone reads:
"Yes, Archie's in."

Moral For Safe Drivers: Stay out from behind the wheel of your car after drinking.
